

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A control circuit computes relative horizontal and vertical inclination angles between a screen and a projector by a line-type passive range-finding device. A display driving section adjusts a projection optical system including a condensing lens on the basis of the vertical and horizontal inclination angles computed by the control circuit, thereby correcting for a keystone distortion in an image projected.